Free rides for some?

Riders say some MBTA workers couldn't care less if you pay Officials deny that employees give free rides

It's an unspoken truth that pretty girls and smooth talkers are occasionally treated to a little "on the house" action.

It happens at restaurants, where free drinks are practically a currency, and if your pal works at the local cinema, you're probably seeing that movie for free.

But for a struggling public transit system where every dollar counts, it would be hard to justify looking the other way when people don't want to pay.

"The MBTA doesn't care about collecting fares," said a man who goes by the name Jack Ryan, and claims to be married to a T worker.

His wife, Ryan said, is "flabbergasted at what the T says and what it actually does."

"Most stations go unmanned," Ryan added. "Talk about total loss of revenue."

While the MBTA has been outspoken on its stance of cracking down on fare dodgers — on July 1 the penalty went up to $50 for the first offense — Twitter is abuzz with posts from gleeful riders who boast that they don't have to pay.

Quoted

"If we were to find employees helping customers dodging fare, there would be pretty significant disciplinary action taken."

MBTA SPOKESMAN JOSHUA ROBIN

"Shout out to the MBTA worker who gave me a free T pass this morning," @Dondo_9 recently tweeted.

While some rejoice on the free rides, others are not so impressed with workers.

"Just asked a #MBTA staff if I could pay commuter rail fare w/card. He said they'd probably let me on for free. #MBTABudget #fail," tweeted @retroandi last week.

Regardless, the transit agency insists there is no internal problem with workers looking the other way when people don't want to pay.

"The authority takes fare evasion extremely seriously," said MBTA Spokesman Joshua Robin, who said no employees have been disciplined this year for failing to enforce fare payment.

"Any employee found to be assisting customers in evading fares would be subject to disciplinary action under the MBTA's progressive discipline policy," Robin said. "But our employees are certainly not the issue."

T officials estimate that system-wide fare evasion accounts for less than 1.5 percent of all boarding, representing roughly $5 to $7 million in revenue each year.

MBTA ramps up efforts

In 2011, the MBTA handed out 3,481 citations to fare dodgers, bringing in roughly $36,445.

Since January, the agency has handed out 2,577 citations. Because of the increase in fines, the MBTA has pulled in $39,548.

T officials estimate that fare evasion system wide accounts for less than 1.5 percent of all boarding, representing roughly $5 to $7 million in revenue each year.

To help cut back on people hopping free rides, the T implemented a front door-only boarding policy for customers at above-ground stations on the Green Line's during weekends, holidays and off-peak hours.

During peak hours, which are defined as 6:30 to 9:30 a.m. and from 3:30 to 7 p.m., customers are able to board at the side and rear doors with a pre-loaded CharlieCard, CharlieTicket or valid pass.

The policy was implemented beginning in January of this year on the E line and expanded to all other lines by mid-April.

Man fatally shot in Boston

BOSTON. A man was fatally shot in downtown Boston early yesterday morning as many of the city's bars and clubs were letting out. Officers were called to the area of Broad Street and Surface Road at about 2:22 a.m. for a report of shots fired, police said.

As they approached the area, officers found a man suffering from a gunshot wound at the intersection of Atlantic Avenue and High Street.

According to police, detectives have identified and interviewed a person believed to be involved in the shooting, but said there have not yet been charges filed. Police are also investigating another shooting that started the weekend.

▶ The gunshot victim was found here.

A 32-year-old man was shot in the torso. Officers were called to 15 Hansborough Street in Mattapan about 11:30 a.m. Friday. The victim was taken to Boston Medical Center and was expected to survive.

Anyone with information about either shooting can call 800-494-TIPS. METRO

Oxford father kills child, self

OXFORD. A horrific shooting has left many people asking questions after a father killed his young daughter and shot his son before killing himself.

Authorities said Daryl Benway, 41, was found dead after having shot himself Saturday night. Benway was found in the master bedroom of his home next to his fatally shot 7-year-old daughter, Abigail, according the Globe.

Benway also shot his 9-year-old son Owen, but the boy survived and was taken to a Worcester hospital, officials said.

Benway's brother was home at the time of the shooting and called police at about 5 p.m., according to the Globe.

Authorities said Benway recently separated from his wife and had no criminal record. The shooting is still under investigation and a motive was unclear, according to the Globe.

Optimism can feel at home in Boston

Urban experiment shines light on the brighter side of city's personality People aren't that bad after all

A member of Project Gratitude checks out some of the many Post-Its thanking people for their random acts of kindness.

When it comes to having a friendly reputation, people are split on whether Boston is chock full of kindness.

In fact, readers of Travel and Leisure Magazine ranked Boston one of the rudest cities in America last year.

But as it turns out, the Hub has its fair share of friendliness.

A recent experiment called "Project Gratitude" debunked the myth that the city is full of self-centered jerks.

A team of six interns at Mullen, a local advertising agency, offered up blank Post-it notes at three Boloco eateries for people to write messages of thanks. They also planted cash-filled wallets around the city to see what would happen.

The result, they say, was encouraging.

Quoted

"I grew up here, and I had always thought the general stereotype that everybody in Boston is self-centered. ... Now, after the project, I've seen so much more good than I ever cared to notice before."
COURTNEY DENNING

"I wouldn't say that I am an overly pessimistic person, but I was absolutely not expecting the reaction we have received thus far. I saw so much kindness over the past few weeks from the most unlikely people," said Willa Huizing, one of the minds behind the project.

Last week the team collected about 300 Post-Its filled with words of gratitude for random acts of kindness.

"We all had an issue with the fact that if somebody does a good deed, most of the time it goes unnoticed," said intern Courtney Denning. "The Post-Its were meant to celebrate these unheralded people."

The other aspect of the project was a little edgier.

Attitudes of gratitude

Hundreds of Post-its flaunted attitudes of gratitude. The group is playing with the idea of turning them into a mixed-media artwork.

- "Thank you to the guy who ran after me when I left my debit card in the ATM ... again. Whoops" — L
- "Thank you to the person who pulled the fire alarm at work today — I enjoyed the time outside!!!" — Anonymous
- "Thank you to the people who give up their seats on the T to my little girl." — Jamie
- "Thank you to the man who gave me a lobster balloon. It made me happy." — Petra, 4 years old

The interns scoured their drawers for old IDs and receipts, hoping to create convincing wallets to drop on the T and on random street corners.

In addition to the outdated, yet personal, information in the wallets, they had money and another crucial element: contact information.

As of yesterday, 11 out of 20 wallets were returned — several within minutes of being dropped.

"It was astounding because we'd drop one, and five minutes later my cell phone would ring," Denning said, adding one homeless man even went so far as to use a pay phone to return the wallet.

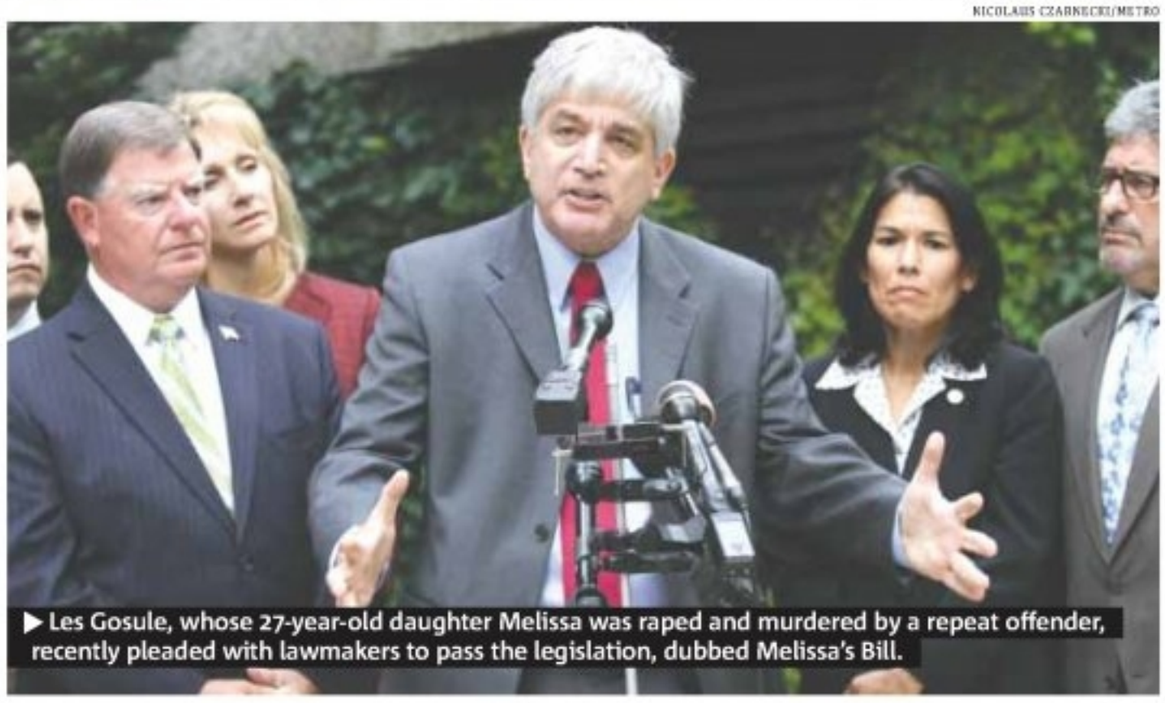
Patrick pushes back repeat offender bill

Supporters frustrated by governor's decision not to sign it Bill would deny parole for third-time offenders

NICOLAUS CZARNECKI/METRO



▶ Les Gosule, whose 27-year-old daughter Melissa was raped and murdered by a repeat offender, recently pleaded with lawmakers to pass the legislation, dubbed Melissa's Bill.

It came so close, but a bill to deny habitual offenders parole will likely fail again.

Supporters of the bill, which would deny parole for those convicted of their third violent offense, expressed their outrage this weekend after Gov. Deval Patrick chose not to sign it.

Instead, Patrick sent the bill back to the legislature with amendments.

"Gov. Patrick has had a busy week defending the interests of those who break the law," said state Sen. Bruce Tarr, the minority leader. "Now he is trying to provide violent repeat criminals with a safety valve."

The bill was stuck in a conference committee for months until both the House and Senate passed it this month. It was put before Patrick who returned it on Saturday.

The bill has been submitted multiple times over the past decade without success.

One of Patrick's issues with the bill is that it did not allow for judges to assign parole in certain circumstances.

"None of us is wise or prescient enough to foresee each and every circumstance in which the new habitual offender provisions may apply," Patrick wrote in a letter to the legislature, according to the State House News Service.

Les Gosule, whose 27-year-old daughter Melissa was raped and murdered after her car broke down, has been a lead supporter of the bill for years. At an event earlier this month, he pleaded with legislators to move the bill forward.

"I'm getting some great hugs, but I'm not getting the bill," he said at the time.

'Where's Wally?' scare hits Boston

BOSTON. Red Sox fans endured an hour of suspense around 2:30 p.m. Friday when their beloved mascot Wally the Green Monster was reported missing.

He was found around 3:30 p.m., apparently the result of a misunderstanding between the Red Sox and an employee, who, according to police, took the mascot costume without permission.

Police said no charges were filed, and the Red Sox tweeted after recovering the costume:

Cheney: Choosing Palin as 2008 VP was a 'mistake'

WASHINGTON. Former Vice President Dick Cheney said in remarks aired yesterday that 2008 Republican presidential candidate John McCain's selection of Sarah Palin as his vice presidential running mate was "a mistake" because of her inexperience.

Cheney said in an interview with ABC News that the main criterion for anyone being considered as a potential future vice president has to be: "Is this person capable of being the president of the United States?" REUTERS

Miscarriage is fresh tragedy for Colorado victim

DENVER. The critically injured mother of the 6-year-old girl killed in the Denver-area movie theater shooting rampage has suffered a miscarriage as a result of her injuries, her family said.

Ashley Moser, 25, who was shot in the neck and abdomen during the July 20 midnight premiere of "The Dark Knight Rises," underwent additional surgery for her injuries on Saturday morning, Moser's family said in a statement.

"Tragically, the extreme trauma she sustained also caused a miscarriage," the statement said. "Her lifetime of care will be a long road."

Moser's daughter, Veronica Moser-Sullivan, was the youngest to die in the shooting spree. REUTERS

Romney 'would back Israeli strike over Iran nuclear capability'

URIEL SINAI/GETTY IMAGES

▶ Mitt Romney arrives to deliver a speech outside the Old City yesterday in Jerusalem, Israel. Romney stated that he backs Israel's right to defend itself against the threat of a nuclear Iran.

U.S. Republican candidate Mitt Romney, presenting himself as Israel's best friend in the Nov. 6 presidential election, said yesterday that "any and all measures" must be used to keep Iran from developing a nuclear weapon.

A top aide said Romney would support an Israeli military strike if all options had been exhausted, but the candidate himself balked at repeating that position.

In a foreign policy speech in Jerusalem, Romney voiced strong support for the alliance between the United States and Israel and seemed to suggest that President Barack Obama had let the relationship flounder.

"We cannot stand silent as those who seek to undermine Israel voice their criticisms. And we certainly should not join in that criticism. Diplomatic distance in public between our nations emboldens Israel's adversaries," said Romney, the walls of the Old City lining the hilltop behind him.

"We should employ any and all measures to dissuade the Iranian regime from its nuclear course, and it is our fervent hope that diplomatic and economic measures will do so. In the final analysis, of course, no option should be excluded. We recognize Israel's right to defend itself and that it is right for America to stand with you," he said. REUTERS

Israel denies report Obama aide shared Iran war plan

A senior Israeli official denied yesterday a newspaper report that President Barack Obama's national security adviser had briefed Israel's Prime Minister Benjamin Netanyahu on a U.S. contingency plan to attack Iran should diplomacy fail to curb its nuclear program.

The Israeli liberal Haaretz daily yesterday quoted an unnamed U.S. official as saying the adviser, Thomas Donilon, had described the plan over dinner with Netanyahu earlier this month.

Haaretz said the briefing was the most significant effort by high-level U.S. officials who had visited Israel in the past month, including Secretary of State Hillary Clinton, to try to dissuade Israel from launching its own military strike on Iran. REUTERS

How startups transform online education

Advances in technology coupled with increased demand for services have given birth to a wave of online learning apps Big name schools have signed up

1 2tor: 2tor is the first startup of its kind to offer full degree programs online at top-tier universities. It's also the most highly funded. As of April, its total investments added up to a little less than $97 million.

2tor partners with universities across the country to help them build and market online degree programs. The startup has created master's degree programs for a variety of schools, including a Master of Arts in Teaching at the University of Southern California and Georgetown University's nursing program.

2tor is making waves for its Web-based infrastructure that allows professors to easily share information with students, create interactive lessons and provide lectures and opportunities for social interaction.

2 Udemy: Udemy is unique because it allows anyone to take or build an online course. The site offers courses on technology, business, music, art, languages, math, science, games, sports and more.

The basic premise is to crowdsource education. Much like how blogging allows anyone to share information, Udemy allows anyone to create courses with nothing more than an internet connection. Many individuals with a desire to learn are cut out of the education system by rising tuition, housing and commuting costs, but Udemy empowers anyone to share and learn at a more affordable rate.

3 Voxy: This startup is allowing users to "learn a language from life," meaning that it uses context and flexibility to teach new languages via Web-based and mobile technology. Voxy turns your real-world conversations, activities and the media you consume into contextual language lessons. The service allows users to control the pace of their learning with tailored language lessons focusing on things that are of interest to them. The iPhone- and Android-friendly app has spent nearly a year as the number one education app in 20 countries.

For the gold

CASSANDRA GARRISON
CASSANDRA.GARRISON@METRO.US

The beach party atmosphere inside Horse Guards Parade today is a stark contrast from the air of royal pageantry you'd typically see on the queen's birthday.

In the 1500s, the site of London's Horse Guards Parade is where Henry VIII watched jousting tournaments. The parade grounds were built in 1745 and are typically home to the annual Trooping of the Colour event.

Today, with the help of 5,000 tons of sand, it has been transformed into an international playing field for Olympic beach volleyball, where 15,000 fans whoop and holler as teams of two bump, set and spike their way to gold.

▶ Spectators have a breathtaking view besides the athletes competing on the sand.

CASSANDRA GARRISON/METRO

It is a surreal scene inside the newly erected stadium, which sits on the prime minister's door step. A skyline of iconic London landmarks, like Westminster Abbey, Big Ben and the London Eye, hover above the stands as frenzied fans whistle at bikini-clad dancers who take to the sand between sets. It's enough to make Queen Elizabeth blush.

Fans from a bevvy of countries enjoyed a vibrant atmosphere reminiscent of an NHL game at Madison Square Garden. Commentators with British accents encourage the crowd to cheer and clap, silly tunes play while "rakers" smooth sand off the court lines, excited fans initiate "the wave" and vendors sell pizza, chips and beer. Bouts of rain prompted a crowd-wide reaction of pulling on plastic ponchos, but fans didn't budge from their seats.

After the Netherlands men's team pulled out a close win over Venezuela, fans went wild. Ann Speelman — a Netherlands native who now lives in London — and her mother proudly waved a flag and gushed about the adrenaline rush of seeing her home country win during the Olympics.

"You're there, you feel it. It is such an amazing experience," Speelman told Metro. "Look at this view. We're so close. To have this as a venue is amazing."

While countries including Australia, Germany, Latvia and Great Britain played today, there were plenty of nationalities represented in the stands. American Pat Jameson, an aerospace engineer from Phoenix, brought his family of four to London to experience the Olympics and still got decked out in red, white and blue to attend a match in Horse Guards Parade, even though Team USA wasn't playing today.

"Gotta represent," he said. "We're just here to soak it in — any venue, any athlete."

Horse Guards Parade will return to its original function after the London Olympics come to an end. But for now, it remains the scene of stiff competition, including a win by American women Kerri Walsh-Jennings and Misty May-Treanor over Australians Tasmin Hinchley and Natalie Cook, in a late-night game on Saturday.

1 America's Dana Vollmer set a world record as she won gold in the 100m butterfly in 55.98 seconds.

2 Michael Phelps was not happy to lose the 4x100m freestyle relay to France.

3 Petr Koukal of the Czech Republic is crushed after losing in badminton men's singles.

4 Reigning women's all-around gymnastics world champion Jordyn Wieber shockingly did not qualify for the Americans.

5 Marianne Vos took gold in the women's road race as she found out all about rainy London.

Three events to catch today:

- Men's 200m freestyle Ryan Lochte goes for his second gold of the Games against China's Yang Sun.
- Men's gymnastics (team) U.S. was the top qualifier and have a chance to win gold for the first time since 1984.
- Women's beach volleyball Misty-May Treanor and Kerri Walsh-Jennings hit the sand for their second match. They've never lost a set.

▶ Checking in with some of Hollywood's biggest names to see what they've been up to — in their own words, in 140 characters or fewer.

We'll eventually hold our peace

Sorry, children of the '90s: Catriona McGinn just lived out your fantasy over the weekend. The 30-year-old advertising exec married Mark-Paul Gosselaar — aka Zack Morris — on Saturday at a winery in California, and is now enjoying a honeymoon in Italy.

We wish them the best, even though we stuck with Gosselaar — for better or for worse, in good times and in mostly bad — through "Saved by the Bell: The College Years."

Norway evicts Snoop

Snoop Dogg isn't welcome in Norway anytime soon. The rapper was banned from the country for two years stemming from an incident last month when marijuana was found in his luggage while en route to a music festival.

Norway's party scene, apparently, doesn't warrant paying someone off. Snoop's legal rep tells the Daily Mail that his client has no plans to appeal and "can live with the decision."

Stewart-Sanders affair wasn't a one-time deal

ALL PHOTOS GETTY IMAGES

▶ Things may not have been innocent on the "Snow White" red carpet.

Kristen Stewart apologized for her "momentary indiscretion" with director Rupert Sanders, but it seems there is more to the story than the one-day fling that Us Weekly photographers crashed last week.

According to Leopold Ross — the brother of Sanders' wife, Liberty Ross — the affair began last fall during the filming of "Snow White and the Huntsman," which Sanders directed and Stewart starred in.

"[Liberty] made some sacrifices for something she thought was worth it, now she knows, right?" Leopold tells UK newspaper The People. "Doubt it was worth it, but it's life. It might actually make things better in the long run. She wasn't that happy for a while, but our family is close, she'll be all right."

Robert Pattinson, apparently, wasn't buying the "momentary" line, either. "Rob wants to have a man-to-man chat with Rupert to find out exactly what happened between him and Kristen," a source tells RadarOnline. "Kristen has already betrayed his trust by cheating, so he can't be sure that she will tell him exactly what went on between her and Rupert. Rupert has a wife and family to save, so Rob feels like he has nothing left to lose and would be honest with him."

Rob, before you sit through what's shaping up to be a rough play-by-play, we encourage you to remember this: You are Robert Pattinson and are surrounded by Hollywood starlets with less than nothing to lose. Choose your chat wisely.

Talking points

Kutcher and Kunis done hiding

Ashton Kutcher and Mila Kunis are having a hard time keeping their rumored romance a secret — especially after showing up to the wrap party for Kutcher's new film, "Jobs," where they "arrived as a couple and left as a couple," a source tells Hollyscoop. "They stayed within five feet of each other the whole entire evening."

Rihanna and Brown still hiding

Rihanna and Chris Brown have reportedly been keeping their clandestine meet-ups going while on vacation, according to Us Weekly. The R&B singer — who split from Brown in 2009 after he was convicted of assaulting her — was relaxing in St. Tropez last week when she heard Brown's rented yacht was on its way. "Rihanna knew Chris was on his way and actually changed her plans late Friday night after calling Chris from the yacht's satellite phone," a source says.

▶ Cook

Cook not about to let tact get in his way

Dane Cook learned the hard way that a week is probably not enough time to wait before making light of a tragedy. The comedian has taken to Twitter to apologize for making a joke about the Aurora, Colo., movie theater shooting, during which 12 people were killed when a gunman opened fire at a "Dark Knight Rises" screening. "So I heard that the guy came into the theater about 25 minutes into the movie. And I don't know if you've seen the movie, but the movie is pretty much a piece of crap," Cook said during his set at L.A.'s Laugh Factory. "[I'm] pretty sure that somebody in that theater, about 25 minutes in, realizing it was a piece of crap, was probably like, 'Ugh, f—ing shoot me.'" News of the joke caused an uproar, prompting Cook to apologize for the "bad judgment call."

No longer 'insane,' Sheen wants to extend 'Anger Management'

GREG GAYNE/FX NETWORK

▶ Charlie Sheen, left, stars as Charlie Goodson and Martin Sheen as Martin Goodson on the Aug. 16 episode of "Anger Management." The comedy airs Thursdays at 9:30 p.m. on FX.

- The sitcom could receive a 90-episode renewal
- The actor — and his dad — are ready to commit

For the first time since his return to television in "Anger Management," Charlie Sheen addressed journalists gathered at the Television Critics Association press tour in Beverly Hills, Calif., on Saturday.

Joined by a number of costars, including Selma Blair and series creator Bruce Helford, Sheen appeared relatively relaxed — or at least weekend-casual, wearing plaid shorts and no socks — to address the critics who had scrutinized his meltdown after he was fired from "Two and a Half Men."

"It was a crazy time, and it was sort of like a dream I couldn't wake up from or some runaway train I couldn't get off of, but I was the conductor," Sheen said, commenting on the year he lived on tiger blood and launched the "My Violent Torpedo of Truth/Defeat is Not An Option" tour.

Sheen described his breakdown as "something that could never happen again, so that was pretty cool." Sticking to the talking points of his redemption story, he added, "I learned a lot. I learned [to] stick to what you know. Don't go on the road with a one-man show in 33 days in 21 cities with no act. My life's different now that I'm not insane anymore."

FX, at least, is banking on the actor to be more accountable. "Anger Management" is poised to receive a 90-episode pickup if its initial run of 10 episodes perform well — and so far, the network is pleased with the ratings. (The show launched on June 28 to the highest series premiere ratings in cable history for a scripted comedy.)

Sheen called that prospect "exciting as hell" and added that he doesn't "think 90 is gonna be enough" episodes to tell the story of Charlie Goodson, his formerly angry ballplayer turned therapist.

The pickup would also herald the addition of Martin Sheen, Charlie's father, to the cast as a series regular. Before a renewal decision is made, the elder Sheen will be guest starring as Martin Goodson, Charlie Goodson's dad, on the episode that airs Aug. 16.

John Landgraf, president and general manager of FX Networks, said adding Martin Sheen "will give an extra dimension to the show, and it will also make it a multigenerational family show."

As for working with his real-life dad, Sheen reminded critics that the veteran had guest starred on his son's previous sitcoms, "Spin City" and "Two and a Half Men."

"I don't want to say we peaked, but [Martin] brings a whole different energy to it," Sheen said. "It's not Martinville — but it's certainly not Charlieville at that point, you know? I think it's the best episode we did."

It's likely they'll have 90 more chances to top it.

Strike a pose

Yoga pose of the week: Warrior III

1 Begin by standing up straight. As you exhale, fold forward. From here, exhale and step your left foot back into a high lunge position (your right knee should be at a right angle). Lay the midline (pubic bone to breastbone) of your torso down on the midline of the right thigh (hip crease to knee) and bring your hands to your right knee: right hand to the outer knee, left hand to the inner knee. Squeeze the knee with your two hands as you slightly lift your torso. On an exhale, slightly turn your knee to the right.

2 From the lunge position, stretch your arms forward (they should be parallel to the floor and to each other). Make sure your palms are facing each other. Exhale and press the head of the right thighbone back and press the heel into the floor. Straighten the front leg as you lift the back leg. As you lift the back leg, try resisting the move by pressing the tailbone into the pelvis.

3 Come up into Warrior III by lunging the torso forward. Don't allow the torso to swing forward or you will lose your balance.

4 Release the hip of the raised leg toward the floor until the two hip points are even and parallel to the floor. Energize the back leg and extend it behind you. Reach in the opposite direction with the arms. Bring the head up slightly and look forward.

5 Hold this position for up to one minute. On an exhale, release back into the lunge. Bring your hands to the floor on either side of the right foot and as you exhale, step your left foot forward to meet your right. Hold for a few breaths before you repeat the pose on the other side.

Benefits:
- Strengthens the ankles, legs, shoulders and back muscles
- Tones the abdomen
- Improves overall balance and posture

When parents won't let go

No insurance necessary

KIM SCHNEIDERMAN, MSW, LCSW
WWW.NOVEL-PERSPECTIVE.COM

The question:

I'm 28 years old and my parents still treat me like a kid, calling me every day to "check in" and constantly asking my whereabouts. How can I get them to let up?

Every adult was once somebody's child. And it's hard for many parents to accept that their children are grown-ups. While your parents' behavior might be appropriate for a teenager, it's a bit extreme at your age. Before you say something to them, I suggest that you examine your own attitudes about your parents' behavior. For example, do you feel somewhat reassured that you still have loved ones looking out for you? Are they the first people you consult when you have a problem or decision to make?

If the answer is "yes," then you may want to explore your own reservations about feeling completely independent. You could be subtly communicating to your parents that you need their support.

Once you've checked in with yourself, and determined that you are ready to fully embrace your independence, then arrange a time to speak with your parents, preferably in person. Tell them that while you love them and appreciate their concern, you would also like them to stop calling and checking in on you so frequently. Explain that it undermines your sense of confidence and independence.

You might want to suggest an actual number of times a week when they can call, or promise to call or text twice a week or every Sunday to say hello. If they refuse, or don't listen, you can exercise your right not to answer the phone every time they call.

Honoring one's parents shouldn't come at the price of honoring yourself.

6 Hot mobile apps for job hunting

It seems like there's an app for everything now, and job hunting is no different. With unemployment holding steady at 8.1 percent, according to the U.S. Bureau of Labor Statistics, job seekers are using any tool available to get ahead of the crowd. Plus, what's easier than using your mobile device?

These days, you can use your phone to watch movies and set reminders — among with a host of other pretty snazzy and sophisticated tasks. As Zooey Deschanel proved, the iPhone's Siri can tell if you it's raining — even looking out the window is a thing of the past. So why not utilize all that technology to get a leg up in the job arena? You certainly wouldn't be the only one with this idea: 77 percent of job seekers have already jumped on the app bandwagon. Here are some apps for job seekers looking to take their search on the go.

1 LunchMeet: LunchMeet is more than just a clever name to make you hungry — it's also a great networking app.

The service connects to your LinkedIn account and uses geotargeting to find industry-specific contacts who may be open to networking. Just connect through LunchMeet, grab lunch or coffee and discuss your industry or career opportunities.

If you're looking to expand your business circle, this could be the app for you. It's also a great way to find a mentor or discover a hidden job lead.

2 Pocket Résumé: So you've found the perfect job, but you have limited time to tailor your résumé and send it off to your potential employer. Pocket Résumé is here to help.

The app pulls the most updated information from your LinkedIn profile and enables you to export your résumé to PDF or Dropbox. It also lets users tailor resumes for specific positions by allowing you to reorder your résumé on the move, whether from your tablet or smartphone. And at $2.99, it's certainly a lot cheaper (and faster) than a typical résumé writer.

3 Jobs You'll Love for Android: Wish job boards could read your mind? The Jobs You'll Love Android app is like Pandora for the job seeker: This app uses your job preferences to help you find the perfect position. Every job viewed by a user can be saved, shared or even disliked. Based on these preferences, the app will recommend other great jobs for you. So the more you use the app, the more it gets to know you — it's like getting great job advice from a friend you keep in your pocket.

4 JobJuice Social Media Search for iPhone: If you're not quite sure how to best use social media to find your next great position, JobJuice is here to help. JobJuice Social Media Search for iPhone is a great learning tool for job seekers looking to incorporate social media into the hunt for great opportunities.

The app aims to help job seekers take advantage of social media to build their personal brand, research and target key companies and reach out to hiring managers without breaching online etiquette.

Interview Prep Questions for iPhone and Android

Are you freaking out because you have a big interview coming up? Turn on your phone and start practicing with Interview Prep Questions. It can be difficult to foresee those tough questions that pop up in interviews, so you can prepare for a wide variety of potential queries with this handy database. The app offers practice questions and will even suggest answers if you're stumped. You can then take those answers and personalize them so they fit your unique qualifications and background.

Preparation is the name of the game when it comes to interviewing, and this app helps you prepare on the go.

SparkHire for iPhone:

So you've been called back for an interview. Now you can put down those keys and pick up your mobile device. SparkHire, a video résumé, interviewing and job board site, has just launched an app version of its video interviewing platform.

▶ Employers can present multiple text-based questions to job seekers who, in turn, respond with short video answers. These video answers can then be viewed by employers anywhere and anytime, which means you can show off your communication skills and personality without taking too much time out of your busy schedule. The app is perfect for passive job seekers who are currently employed, as they can easily interview during normal business hours without going AWOL for hours at a time.

Tips for standing out at a job fair

BRAND X PICTURES

▶ Prepare for a job fair as you would for a job interview.

Job fairs are crowded conventions that are swelling with people who want the same position you do. It's easy to get lost in the mix and become just another average applicant. If you're going to take the time to attend one of these events, you need to be prepared with a bag of tricks to help you stand out from the crowd.

Do your research first, and learn about the companies and the open positions. Then develop a plan of action. "Going into the event with a strategy will ensure you talk with and meet those organizations you are most interested in," says Andrea St. James, career counselor at Western New England University. "Without a strategy, you may miss a company or opportunity to gain valuable contacts," she adds. If you can map out which companies you want to speak with, you will be able to better utilize your time.

Be realistic about the amount of time you have — it won't be much. "Prepare your elevator pitch — who are you, what experiences do you have, what motivates you, what makes you unique — and practice it. Make yourself stand out," says Sara Love, Manager of Experiential Programs at Harrisburg University of Science and Technology. Be ready to think on your toes, too, and to show off your people skills. "Since job fairs focus on live interaction, job seekers are best suited highlighting their communication skills and their ability to articulate their understanding of what the job entails — and how their experience, education and skills would be a good fit," explains Mike Vogel, Director of Shaker Virtual Events.

Finally, don't forget that résumé! A job fair is like a regular interview, and you should be prepared with paperwork, be professionally dressed and be ready to get a job offer on the spot. ● JULIA WEST

Right to buy chicken will be eagerly enforced

I hope that when I make my first purchase at Chick-fil-A, some fool attempts to stop me. My right to buy what I want — any legally sold product — will not be denied by a bunch of sick, arrogant and bitter social misfits. JOHN BEVAN, VIA E-MAIL

Sadly, all have right to free speech

Phil Howard said that Metro had posted a narrow-minded viewpoint from a narrow-minded person. A majority, if not most, of the letters that are sent in to the editorial, or commentary, or letters section of every newspaper have amazingly ignorant views posted. It is a matter of numbers. If newspapers were picky and tried to choose half-intelligent statements, hardly any letters would be printed. Free speech applies to all — but it seems that loud people with nothing bright or beneficial to say are the ones most likely to hide behind the First Amendment. LUCY MARTINEZ, VIA E-MAIL

Justice should take the high road

Our penal system is intended to mete out not cruel and unusual punishment but only the punishment that fits the crime. The challenge of that system is to provide punishment that fits the crime and not to seek revenge. The function of that system is to support a humane civilization, to keep it from descending into vengefulness and abject cruelty in the face of heinous crimes. Obviously abject cruelty and a disregard of the dignity of human life is a main feature of the Aurora killer. I don't want our society to be a copycat of the criminal it will be trying in its courts. BETH R. WALSH, VIA E-MAIL

Trickle-down imposed on poor

With poverty levels now at 1965 proportions and further increases expected, the most heinous aspect of the trickle-down theory, or better still, the "tinkle"-down theory is that those above fully expect those below to truly like the experience, while unquestioningly and enthusiastically supporting its continuance. GLENN HAYES, VIA E-MAIL

Hiding tax returns makes Mitt traitor

OK, so the Romney team has calculated there's less damage taking the heat from hiding his tax returns than from releasing them. Reminds me of when the tea-baggers were demanding Obama's birth certificate and he obligingly went ahead and posted it on the Internet.

That tells you something right there about the character and honesty differences between these two men. What Romney probably has to hide is vast income from offshore accounts with far less than fair U.S. taxes paid.

Romney still likes to cast himself as a patriot. I'd say he's more a traitor, ripping off the country he wants to rule. PAUL SIMONS, VIA-EMAIL

Horoscope

♋ Cancer June 21-July 22. If you're not careful, you could find yourself in the unenviable position of having others making all the decisions for you. Once you lose control, it could be difficult to regain it.

♌ Leo July 23-Aug. 22. Onlookers might believe you to be a better talker than a doer. This can easily be corrected, however, if you act first and leave the conversation until later.

♍ Virgo Aug. 23-Sept. 22. Exercise restraint in your commercial dealings, and don't jump on the first offer you receive. Thoroughly study all that is involved, both the obvious points and the subtleties.

♎ Libra Sept. 23-Oct. 23. Friends and associates will quickly become rattled about a critical situation if you are too indecisive. Once you've studied the matter, make your best judgment call and abide by it.

♏ Scorpio Oct. 24-Nov. 22. Manage the people in your charge with a gentle hand, because they will respond more favorably to kindness than to demands or anger.

♐ Sagittarius Nov. 23-Dec. 21. Instead of handling your resources with prudence, you could easily succumb to your more extravagant impulses. Remember, what you waste now won't be there when you really need it.

♒ Aquarius Jan. 20-Feb. 19. There's a chance you'll become involved in an endeavor in which all the real power will reside in the hands of another. Should this happen, don't fight what you can't change.

♓ Pisces Feb. 20-March 20. Historically, when you spend impulsively you seldom walk away with a good deal. If you're not careful, it could be one of those times when you'll repeat this pattern.

♈ Aries March 21-April 19. Friends who want to support you might turn reluctant if you come off as too self-serving. Do unto others as you would do unto yourself.

♉ Taurus April 20-May 20. The biggest thing you might have to overcome is a lack of belief in your capabilities. If you don't have any faith in yourself, why should others?

♊ Gemini May 21-June 20. Not everyone with whom you'll be involved will be in accord with your way of thinking — but show a willingness to have a meeting of the minds and good things will happen. BERNICE BEDE OSOL

One shot at redemption

With a daunting stretch run and growing gap in wild-card race, this is the last gasp ◗ Ten games at 'unfriendly' Fenway coming up

There have been portions of the recent Red Sox schedule that have stood as "defining" stretches, times when optimists hope the club can prove that it remains relevant. Each one ends with little fanfare and more ammunition for the growing legion of pessimists. The six-game road trip that concluded Sunday in the Bronx was one such stretch, again doing little to turn around an increasingly awkward and lackluster campaign.

If there are any optimists left (there was a recent sighting of one in Saugus), they must be gearing up for the 10-game homestand that begins tonight, the next, and perhaps last, of those "defining" stretches.

The homestand, including visits from Detroit, Minnesota and Texas, is the longest this season. Once complete, the Sox play 32 of their last 50 games on the road, including two trips to New York and a nine-gamer on the West Coast.

Here are three things that must occur to restore hope:

1 DAVID MUST DOMINATE
Entering last night the Sox were 4-7 since David Ortiz went down with an Achilles injury. They've scored five runs or less in eight of those 11 games, six times scoring three or fewer. Boston is a top-notch offense with Ortiz in the lineup. Without him, it is pedestrian. All signs point to Ortiz returning Wednesday night when he is eligible to come off the disabled list.

2 BUCH(HOLZ) THE TREND
Raise your hand if you are sick of hearing that the Red Sox need Jon Lester and Josh Beckett to pitch better. As true as it is, it's a tired statement. Too obvious. What they need almost as much is for Clay Buchholz to stay on fire. The righty is 4-1 with a 2.47 ERA in his last eight starts. He can set a tone for the homestand tonight in the series-opener against Detroit — and perhaps continue to support an exceptionally average staff.

3 SURVIVE THE DEADLINE
It seems likely that general manager Ben Cherington will stand pat at the trade deadline. Perhaps he will make a cosmetic move, but once the deadline comes and goes tomorrow, maybe those still left in the clubhouse can look at one another, realize this is their team and begin to play with a chip on their shoulders. The value in trading a big name will likely not be there throughout MLB and bringing in a big name would take a boatload of valuable prospects.

US trumps Parker-led France team

GETTY IMAGES

▶ Tony Parker

The U.S. Olympic men's basketball team isn't afraid of a cold shooting night from one or two of its stars. Due to its depth, it can certainly overcome obstacles.

Kevin Durant (22 points) proved to be the star of stars yesterday as his pinpoint shooting allowed the U.S. to overcome some early ugliness in beating France, 98-71, in London.

France was expected to be a solid test for the U.S. as it featured San Antonio Spurs point guard Tony Parker. Parker wore goggles due to the vision impairment he suffered after a much-publicized night club incident, which also involved musicians Drake and Chris Brown, in which shards of glass from a broken bottle fell into his left eye. Parker scored 10 points for his home country. ● METRO

Taking shots early

◗ Jets cornerback Cromartie fires first shot of 2012 between New England and the Sons of New Jersey ◗ Belichick's defensive prowess in question

It's never too early for a little verbal jousting between the Jets and Patriots, even if it typically only works one way.

New York cornerback Antonio Cromartie, no stranger to the rivalry's smack talk (he once called Tom Brady an a—hole), got things started this past weekend when he addressed Bill Belichick's perceived brilliance as a defensive mind.

"Did I say his name? It's Rex and LeBeau," Cromartie told Newsday. "I got a one and a two, not a one, a two and a three."

GETTY IMAGES

▶ Antonio Cromartie

The former San Diego Chargers star was speaking about how his own head coach, Rex Ryan, and Pittsburgh defensive coordinator Dick LeBeau were alone as the two smartest defensive coaches in the NFL. The Patriots beat the Jets twice last season, by scores of 30-21 and 37-16. New York knocked the Pats out of the 2010 playoffs. ● MATT BURKE

Rex talk

Jets head coach Rex Ryan also touched on the Patriots over the weekend:

"Do I respect New England and the fact that [they have] won our division a zillion times? ... It always goes through them. ... When you talk about conceding the division, yeah right. Not me."
